

YELLOW ZONE

The more healthy relationships a child has, the more likely they will be to flourish and thrive. Relationships are the agents of change, and the most powerful therapy is human love. -Bruce Perry

Child development is influenced by many factors, including the child's relationships, experiences and environment. Children need to feel safe and secure in order to be able to fully develop. Once they feel secure, the magic of everyday moments helps build strong, healthy brains!

A Yellow Zone is an environment that promotes healthy development and well-being through 5 pillars:

Help Spirituality Learn Socialize Play

Research demonstrates that these 5 pillars nurture the social, psychological, and emotional aspects of mental health.

Use the information in this guide to create a Yellow Zone, a place where even the smallest of us can flourish.

Help

Research has proven that helping others is actually a core need for overall well-being. Doing an act of kindness decreases stress, improves happiness, lowers blood pressure, release "feel good" hormones and even inspire others! The key to is to do something that pulls you out of your normal routine, something extra, special, and remarkable to improve the happiness of someone else. In fact, kindness is contagious! Kindness can improve the happiness of the giver, receiver and any observers. This is why it is common to see people "pay it forward."

Spirituality

Spirituality can be practiced in a variety of ways, such as meditation and mindfulness. Meditation and mindfulness reduces rumination of stress, boosts working memory and focus, lessens emotional reactivity and boosts cognitive flexibility, creates greater relationship satisfaction, increases happiness and boosts the immune system. We can also help children promote spiritual well-being through value, beliefs, purpose, and goals both physically and mentally.

Learn

Focus on learning something new each and every day. Research has proven that learning is actually a core need for psychological well-being because as human beings, we have a natural desire to learn and progress. It is through learning that we build confidence and a sense of self-efficacy. Studies also highlight the effects of learning new things, which includes building emotional resilience, social capabilities, positive health behaviors and better physical health.

Socialize

Establishing social connections, listening skills, and participating in activities like gratitude; we can build our resiliency and flourish. Gratitude is associated with optimism and has been determined that grateful people are happier, receive more social support, are less stressed, and are less depressed. Research shows people who have a high level of gratitude have strengthened cardiac and immune systems, decreased stress, anxiety, depression and headaches, higher levels of happiness, improved emotional intelligence and increased self esteem.

Play

Play contributes to flourishing by optimizing healthy brain development and managing stress. Play has proven to improve social-emotional, cognitive, language, and self-regulation skills which are carried on through adulthood. Other benefits of play include improving self-esteem, confidence, and creativity while developing their imagination, dexterity, and physical, cognitive, and emotional strength. In fact, play has even been shown to help children adjust to the school setting and even to enhance children's learning readiness, learning behaviors, and problem-solving skills.

Help

Random Acts of Kindness (RAOK) can be a very simple, yet effective way to brighten another person's day. When teaching children about RAOK, ensure you provide a clear understanding of what kindness looks like. You may teach them the term "bucket filling," which refers to a system that encourages children to fill up each other's invisible buckets by doing RAOK.

Lead by Example!

Smile and say hello to a stranger · Give someone a compliment · Hold the door open for others
 Leave a positive note for the mail person · Write a thank you note · Say "please" and "thank you"
 Donate unused toys · Read to each other · Give a hug · Tell your child you appreciate them

Did you know? Holding a handshake or a hug for at least 6 seconds releases oxytocin, the neurochemical that helps us feel connected and loved.

Spirituality

Children who have negative experiences or trauma often possess the belief that they are unworthy, damaged, or worse. These negative thought patterns build the belief system that is carried on through adulthood. It is important to help build children's self-esteem and positive belief system. Giving children positive affirmations daily will help them internalize positive beliefs about themselves, which will boost their confidence and help them to possess a healthy self-esteem.

Example Positive Thoughts & Affirmations

I am worthy · I believe in myself and my abilities · I have many talents · I matter · I will get better
 My family and friends love me for who I am · I am deserving of love, happiness, trust and kindness
 Today, I am a leader · I believe I can be whatever I want to be · Today is going to be a great day
 All of my problems have a solution · I believe in my goals and dreams · I can make a difference

We are busier than ever! Children need opportunities to take a break throughout their busy day. Practicing meditation and mindfulness for just a few minutes is a great way to effectively give children a chance to rest their minds. Learn

Growth Mindset is a concept that refers to the idea that when putting forth effort, it is possible to increase intelligence, talents and abilities. People who encompass a Growth Mindset acknowledge that their abilities develop with experience. They continue to seek out opportunities to gain knowledge to further expand their skills. It is closely related to self-esteem. The Growth Mindset is a learned attribute that leads to lifelong success. Establish a positive environment that provides opportunities for children to gain confidence and learn strategies to complete tasks, solve complex problems and overcome challenges. See a few ways below to help your children develop a growth mindset.

Praise children for:

- Effort
- Progress
- Hard work
- Learning from a mistake

The power of "yet"

- You can't do it "yet"
- You don't know it "yet"
- If you learn and practice, you WILL!

Failure & Mistakes = Learning

- "Mistakes help you improve and learn for next times"
- "Lets see what other ways you can try"

Socialize

Research shows only about 10 percent of our happiness depends on our situation, which means that WE are responsible for our own happiness! One major component to one's happiness is resilience and the ability to manage stress. Resilience is a learned skill and the more it is practiced, the better we become at it. One way to build one's resilience is to express gratitude often. We can do this by practicing being content and focusing on what we have, not on what we don't. Gratitude is contagious. Expressing it regularly cultivates a more optimistic attitude and appreciation for everyday moments.

3 Good Things

Three Good Things is an evidence-based tool that refocuses your mind on the positive, instead of the negative. Have children designate a notebook as their Gratitude Journal. Then ask your child to write down 3 good things that happened to them the day prior. Remind them that positive things can be big or small! A smile, a hug, holding the door for someone, sunshine, blue sky, warm weather, cozy nights, laughter, giving compliments, etc.

Model Gratitude

Research shows that people are more likely to value gratitude when they can see it firsthand. Be a role model by expressing your gratitude to your children throughout the day. This will demonstrate that gratitude is an important value. Tell them stories about what you are grateful for, and make sure that they always hear thank you. This is particularly important for younger kiddos.

Play, every day

Play supports the formation of safe, stable, and nurturing relationships with all caregivers that children need to thrive. Children love to play and become absorbed in the activities they choose for themselves. Don't forget, play isn't only for children! Join them!
